History of New York City's Water Supply System. After careful study, the City decided to develop the Catskill region as an additional water source. The Board of Water Supply proceeded to plan and construct facilities to impound the waters of the Esopus Creek, one of the four watersheds in the Catskills, and to deliver the water throughout. The Catskill Aqueduct, completed in 1914, is significantly larger than New Croton and brings water from two reservoirs in the eastern Catskill Mountains. The New York City water supply system leaks at a rate of up to 36 million US gallons (, m<sup>3</sup>) per day.
